

Observation 5th grade change lyrics

Three of the boys were gone today so the boys group was just two students which worked ok. They went back and forth with ideas and came up with a theme and started their lyrics. I put one of the boys as leader, but really they were equal and coming up with the ideas for their lyrics. The girls group had some serious disagreements on a theme and one student was very upset with their ideas. It was interesting because the theme changed due to her suggestion, but still she had little participation even though they listened to her ideas. The assigned leader let one of the dominate students take over which didn't hurt the project. The group of six girls chimed in back and forth to add lines of lyrics to the song. The dominate student did add her opinion to the ideas that were suggested. You could say the dominate student became the "director" and the other students became the "choir." They tested the lyric and adjusted it to fit the song. As they were closer to the chorus, they became stuck on what they were going to use. I am still not sure if that will change. They did say they would do a Zoom to work on it after school. I will have to ask to see if they did that to work on the song.